

DESPERATE HOUSECAT SIRIUS 28046

SIRIUS was brought to AAS after his owner moved and left him behind. He is described as affectionate, cuddly, and playful. His behavior at the shelter is sometimes erratic, but that could be because he hasn't been neutered yet and his hormones are all over the place. He also doesn't seem to care for other cats, so being stuck in a kennel surrounded by them is frustrating. SIRIUS adores any kind of toys, especially if they contain catnip. He also adores being petted, and will headbutt your hand for more love. A kennel is no place for this energetic boy, who can sometimes get overstimulated. He needs an experienced cat person who can give him the attention he craves while being aware of any warning signs he may give. We would like to see SIRIUS out of the shelter through either adoption or foster.
